

Transformations Within the New South Africa June 17 – July 3, 2009

This course will examine social issues, development strategies, and health/mental health programs in the new South Africa. We will explore how the country's fledgling democracy and its people are redesigning organizations and interventions to respond to the needs of all South Africans. Our stays in Johannesburg and Cape Town will include visits to townships, local and national governmental and non-governmental agencies, health and medical facilities, cultural and tourist landmarks, and universities.

Lectures and discussions on sustainable development, the HIV/AIDS pandemic, political transitions, the Truth and Reconciliation Commission, and racial and cultural issues in South Africa will accompany this experience, allowing opportunity for analysis, reflection and collective learning. We will engage with people working in townships such as Soweto, Mamelodi and Guguletu, visit a medical facility treating persons with HIV/AIDS and an orphanage for HIV/AIDS children, a women's advocacy center, a project of the Center for Integrated Rural Development and cultural centers and museums. We will also visit Robben Island where Nelson Mandela was imprisoned, and meet with South African students and with UNC SSW graduates teaching and practicing social work in South Africa.

This course is open to all graduate and upper division undergraduate students, as well as practitioners, administrators, and educators in social work, public health, education, public policy, religion, medicine and related fields who want to learn more about South African social issues and culture. Friends and family members of participants are also welcome; however, priority will be given to students and social work educators and practitioners. There are no prerequisites for this course.
