SCHOOL OF SOCIAL WORK

COURSE NUMBER: SOWO 540 – Chapel Hill, Monday and Tuesday sections
COURSE TITLE: Social Work Practice with Individuals and Families
INSTRUCTORS: Marty Weems
School of Social Work
116-C Tate Turner Kuralt Building
Phone: (919) 843-9161
Email: weems@email.unc.edu

OFFICE HOURS: By appointment
SEMESTER: Fall, 2009

COURSE DESCRIPTION: This course provides the foundation for social work practice with individuals, families and groups. It emphasizes basic knowledge, analytic and practice skills, and values necessary for practice.

EXPANDED COURSE DESCRIPTION: Students will learn a variety of direct practice skills in this course and gain an understanding of how social and physical contexts influence their practice. Some of these skills include: basic interviewing skills, listening skills, rapport building, learning to engage individuals, families and groups at different stages and levels of intervention. In addition, students will learn skills to develop appropriate goals for interventions and be able to differentiate between behavioral, psychological and environmental goals. Students will also learn about various assessment frameworks including: biopsychosocial-spiritual, ecological, mental status exams, differential diagnosis, and ethnographic interviewing.

COURSE OBJECTIVES: Upon completion of the course the student will be able to demonstrate:

1. An understanding of different client systems, within the context of community and culture, as a primary nexus for self-definition, growth and change, and the environmental forces that affect a client's potential for growth and change.
2. An understanding of professional social work roles, values, and ethics associated with social work services to individuals, families, and small groups.
3. Knowledge of the pivotal importance of the worker-client relationship, and skill in establishing respectful, mutual, empowering professional relationships with clients.
4. Ability in basic interviewing skills, such as listening, empathy, genuineness, pacing, confrontation, and focusing.
5. Ability to assess client strengths and problems, and the capacity to identify and understand the impact of diversity, including issues of difference such as race, gender, socioeconomic status, disability, sexual orientation, and the influence of social, economic, and political environments on client functioning within the context of a biopsychosocial perspective.
6. Knowledge of and skill in developing mutually-agreed upon goals with clients, and developing appropriate service plans from these goals.
7. Knowledge of and beginning skill in a range of social work roles, including case management, interventions with different client systems, and crisis intervention.
8. Knowledge of and beginning skill in the monitoring and evaluation of practice, and of the importance of involving clients in this evaluative process.
9. Knowledge of and beginning skill in appropriate termination strategies with clients.

THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA AT CHAPEL HILL
SCHOOL OF SOCIAL WORK

10. The capacity for critical self-awareness and self-examination and the effective use of supervision, feedback from colleagues, and current social work research and literature.

DIRECT PRACTICE SKILLS TARGETED IN SOCIAL WORK 540

Students will develop skills in the following:

1. The ability to utilize team consultation, and clinical feedback;
2. Developing and sharpening the skills of critical thinking and self-awareness;
3. Assessing one's personal and professional ethics and values as they may impact service delivery to clients;
4. Applying a family perspective, to the various theoretical models and approaches to social work service delivery with individuals, families and small groups;
5. Developing appropriate professional social work relationships with clients;
6. Conducting client assessments, including the capacity to identify and understand the impact of race, gender, ethnic origin, socioeconomic status, sexual orientation, disability and other factors of difference on the assessment and social intervention process;
7. Developing appropriate client treatment plans and goals;
8. Implementing environmental and psychosocial methods of social interventions, including competence in relevant verbal and written communication and interviewing skills;
9. Evaluating one's own direct practice.

TEACHING METHODS

The success of this class depends on the development of a supportive learning environment, reflecting the values of the social work profession. A supportive learning environment is fostered by listening to the ideas and views of others, being able to understand and appreciate a point of view which is different from your own, articulating clearly your point of view, and linking experience to readings and assignments. We will appreciate your contributions to making this a safe and respectful class for learning and growth.

THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA AT CHAPEL HILL
SCHOOL OF SOCIAL WORK

This course will use a variety of teaching and learning methods, including lectures, group discussion, role plays, videos, cartoons and handouts. You are expected to actively participate, drawing from assignments, readings, your field placements, and other experience. We will be available during office hours and by phone and email to address questions that may arise between class sessions. Please seek us out!

CLASS ASSIGNMENTS

Several methods will be used to determine your progress in the class and your achievement of the course objectives. The assignments are described below, and assignments, expectations and grading criteria will be discussed more thoroughly during the first class session. All written assignments should use references following APA format and be typed or word processed using correct grammar, punctuation and spelling.

- Class Participation counts for 10% of your final grade. Everyone will receive a standard score of 100 for participation, in recognition of a norm of attendance, contributions to small group assignments, and informed participation in class discussion. Points will be deducted from the base score if you miss class, are late, or are unprepared.
- Quizzes - Two short quizzes will each be worth 10% of your final grade. They will address material from class readings, lectures and handouts, and will be given during class sessions on Monday, October 12 (covering sessions 1-6) and Monday December 7 (covering sessions 7-14).
- Interview Analysis - This assignment will give you the opportunity to record an interview use it as a tool for your own critical reflection and skill development and for seeking feedback from others. The assignment and grading criteria are more fully described separately.
- Interview Critique - In this subsequent assignment, you will have the opportunity to review others' recordings and provide them with feedback. (You will also receive feedback from peers.) This assignment and the grading criteria are described more fully at the end of this document.
- Biopsychosocial Assessment - This assignment requires the synthesis of various topics from the duration of the class. In it, you will complete a comprehensive written assessment of a client, based on a videotaped case that we will provide. Based on the assessment, you will present preliminary goals for work and a plan for intervention and evaluating progress. The assignment and grading criteria are more fully described separately. Your case summary will be due one week after the last class session, or earlier, if you like.

COURSE EVALUATION:

Interview Analysis	35%
Interview Critique	10% (5% each)
Quiz 1	10%
Quiz 2	10%
Biopsychosocial Assessment	25%
Class Attendance and Participation	10%

GRADING SYSTEM:

The scores for each assignment will be combined and converted to the following scale for final grading:

94 and above H	70 – 79 L
80 – 93 P	69 and below F

POLICY ON INCOMPLETES AND LATE ASSIGNMENTS

A grade of “Incomplete” will be given in extenuating circumstances and in accordance with SSW and University policy. Assignments are due in class on the day as noted in the course outline. Late assignments, i.e., those not handed in to me in class on the day due, will be reduced 10 points for each day they are late unless we have agreed upon an extension. Please plan your work to have things completed on time and keep me informed if any problems arise.

If, due to an emergency, you will miss a quiz, you must notify me prior to the class and make arrangements to make it up at the earliest possible time. Unexcused absence from an exam will result in a grade of zero for the exam.

POLICY ON ACADEMIC DISHONESTY

Please refer to the APA Style Guide, The SSW Manual, and to the SSW “Writing and Citing Guide” for information on attribution of quotes, plagiarism and appropriate use of assistance in preparing assignments. All written assignments should contain a signed pledge from you stating that, “I have not given or received unauthorized aid in preparing this written work”. If you have any questions about what compliance with this expectation entails, please don’t hesitate to speak with me.

In keeping with the UNC Honor Code, if reason exists to believe that academic dishonesty has occurred, a referral will be made to the Office of the Student Attorney General for investigation and further action as required.

POLICY ON ACCOMMODATIONS FOR STUDENTS WITH DISABILITIES

Students who have disabilities that affect participation in the course should notify me if they need special accommodations in instructional format, examination format, etc., considered.

COURSE OUTLINE

The class format is based on the understanding that you are prepared and active learners. Reading the assigned materials prior to the date they are due is a prerequisite to getting the most out of class sessions and successfully meeting the course objectives.

Assignment 1

Interview Recording and Analysis

The purpose of this assignment is to give you the opportunity to practice an initial session with a client and to use the recorded session as a tool to reflect on and assess your work. The assignment is also designed to encourage you to apply concepts about interviewing, social work relationships, and problem solving to your work, to engage in the process of developing self-awareness, and to constructively use peer case consultation. The assignment requires you to 1) create an audio or process recording of an interview, 2) use this record to analyze your performance, and 3) critically examine ten segments of the interview to identify and analyze the communication techniques you used.

The process recording itself is a written record of everything that took place in an interview, including everything said by both the worker and the client. Do not summarize or paraphrase what each person said. Rather, report their actual words and nonverbal actions as best you can recall. Please resist the urge to “beautify” or even make up what occurred in your interview. Only through reflecting everything as it occurred can you benefit from this assignment.

Because process recording is a learning tool, these materials do not become part of the client's formal case record. The value of process recording comes from the reflection in writing up an interview, even if it is painful and time consuming. Key statements, barriers, patterns, methods, and techniques become clearer and then become useful insights for supervision and learning.

You will NOT be graded on your performance in the interview. You will be graded on your ability to accurately apply concepts on engagement and communication, and to use the interview in assessing strengths, weaknesses, and barriers to communication and relationship building. There are examples of process recordings in Garrett (1982), Strom-Gottfried (1999), Kagle (1996), and Wilson (1980). If desired and feasible, you may make an audio recording of the interview and transcribe it into the paper format.

Discuss this assignment with your field instructor, who will provide information on agency policies and processes for audio taping and will assure that you protect client confidentiality and disguise all distinguishing information regarding the client, including names and places. With your field instructor's guidance, select an interview lasting about 20 minutes. This may be a portion of a longer interview. As soon as possible after the interview has concluded, record the interview using the format described in Part 2 below.

On the due date, bring copies of the completed assignment for the instructor and two other group members. During following week, review the process recordings you have received and prepare two critiques for Assignment 2. After these have been submitted, the group will meet to discuss all the cases and to select one to present to the whole class for consultation.

Preparing the Process Recording and Interview Analysis

Part 1: The Context

Begin your written work by providing the context for the interview. Give a brief description of your agency and an explanation of the service you provide. Describe, briefly, the basic relevant demographic information about your client, including age, gender, race, socioeconomic status, educational level, and occupation. Describe the family structure available to the client, the relevant community context, the client's appearance and demeanor when you first met, and the reason and circumstances of the client's request for services. Summarize what you knew about the client before this session, and explain your purpose for the interview.

Part 2: The Interview

Record the process of the interview. This section consists of three columns. It is easiest to use the Table function in Microsoft Word to create these columns. There is no maximum length for this portion of the assignment.

First, in the first column, record the dialogue as it occurred in the interview. This is a verbatim, word-for-word description of what was said in the interview—the “he said, she said” portion of the assignment. You may use the audiotape and your written notes to supplement your memory. Complete this column before you begin your analysis.

After you have recorded all the dialogue, describe all actions, nonverbal activity, and your gut reactions to the client and to the interview as it took place in the second column. Include your unspoken thoughts and your feelings as the interview progressed.

The third column is typically used by field instructors for their comments. For the purpose of the assignment, you will use the column as a space to critique your own work. It is generally best to complete this third column after some time has elapsed, as it will better enable you to gain a critical perspective on the interview.

- How did your work compare with practice skills you are learning in class?
- Where were your strengths?
- What were your weaknesses?
- What messages did you miss?
- What exchanges or events elicited your strong feelings?
- What might you have said or done differently? Why?
- Where did you feel you were particularly effective?

Part 3: The Analysis

Select 10 of your own consecutive exchanges with the client for a more comprehensive analysis. The following format should be used for this portion of the paper:

Use the Table function to create two columns. Copy the ten consecutive verbalizations and responses from the first column of the interview section to the first column of this section. Use the second column to analyze each exchange: state your purpose (P), label the skill (S), evaluate the effectiveness of the skill (C), and suggest an alternative (A).

Purpose (P). Indicate your purpose for using this particular skill at this time in the interview. State what intended to accomplish.

Skill (S). Label the interviewing skill used in this response. See Hepworth et. al, chapters 5 & 6, for a thorough discussion of skills.

Critique (C). Evaluate the effectiveness of this skill at this point in the interview and given your session purpose.

Alternative (A). Suggest a more useful alternative that you could have used. Use an actual example rather than further critique or a generality. There are always alternatives.

Example

Husband: At first I had a difficult time in accepting this, but through friends and a social worker that I saw a few times I am doing well for myself. Social Worker: I am sure it was very hard to accept that W wanted a separation, and I think you were lucky to have the support from your friends at this hard time for you.	P. To communicate to H that I heard the feelings he was communicating beyond just what he was saying. S. Reflection C. I think that I achieved my purpose but it might have been better if, at the end of this statement, I pulled W into the flow of the discussion so as not to exclude her altogether. A: To say what I did here but add “W, how did you cope with the separation between you two?”
--	--

Part 4: Diagnostic Summary

The process recording/dialogue analysis should be followed by a one or two page summary of your observations, impressions, and analytical thoughts. This portion focuses on the case in light of your interview. What is your sense of the client, his or her issues, needs, and assets at this point in the working relationship? What next steps do you anticipate in this case? What environmental (large system factors) impinge on this client’s situation?

Part 5: Questions for Further Study

Identify two or three thoughtful questions, problems, or issues in this work around which you would like consultation from your classmates. This can be about the case or about your development as a professional, or both!

Part 6: Reference List

Support your analysis with course materials as appropriate. Prepare of list of references using APA style. This is intended to include course readings that support your interview and analysis, however, you are welcome to include outside readings as well.

Evaluation Elements:	Points	Score
Part 1 clearly describes the context for the interview, including the type of recording used and the client's permission.	10
The first column in Part 2 provides a verbatim account of the interview, without paraphrasing or summarizing the dialogue.	5
The second column in Part 2 clearly describes client and worker actions, nonverbal exchanges, and the worker's feelings throughout the interview.	5
The third column in Part 2 accurately identifies the worker's strengths and weaknesses and lists goals for learning. These reflections are informed by readings and class discussions.	5
Part 3 includes ten consecutive exchanges between worker and client.	5
Part 3 accurately labels the skills that were used by the worker.	10
Part 3 accurately links the ten verbal exchanges to planned change and the worker's intended outcomes and purposes.	5
Part 3 demonstrates knowledge of cultural competence, the structure and conduct of an interview, self-awareness, and the ability to accurately critique one's own practice.	10
Part 3 offers appropriate, specific alternatives, based on the information above, to improve the interaction.	10
Part 4 reflects critical depth and appropriately incorporates content from class readings and discussions. General description and analysis of session accurately addresses requisite facets of initial session, the effects of diversity, context and setting, and the rationale for the goals and interventions which follow.	10
In Part 5, consultation questions are thoughtful and derived from the case.	10
The paper maintains client confidentiality.	5
The paper contains the honor code, is well-written and demonstrates basic mastery of sentence structure, with no grammatical, spelling, or typing errors.	5

Assignment 2
The Interview Critiques

The Interview Critiques are based on the Interview Analyses. The class will be divided into three Peer Consultation Groups. On the day your group's Interview Analyses are due, give one copy to me and two to members of your group. Be sure that each person in your group receives papers from two other people. The guidelines below will help you develop these critiques, which are due the week AFTER your group's analyses are submitted. When yours is due, give one copy to me and one to the person whose interview you evaluated. Your comments should be based on what you have read and learned about practice. Support your opinions with appropriate citations from class readings. Each critique should be 3-5 pages long, using 1" margins and 12-point Times New Roman font. Do not put your name on the critique. Instead, submit a separate cover sheet that includes your name, unique identifier, and the Honor Code. In addition to the standards Honor Code Language, please include the following: "I will respect the privacy of the client information received in this assignment and adhere to the NASW Code of Ethics in its use."

For this assignment, you may not consult with anyone other than me and your field and task instructors.

Some Possible Areas to Comment on in Interview Critiques

- Was the purpose of the interview clear? Did the interview flow appropriately from the purpose?
- Is what the worker tried to do consistent with the expressed needs of the client?
- Was a family perspective taken in this case? How was it operationalized?
- Is the worker aware of any other issues/needs the client may be experiencing that are contributing to the problem(s)? Other areas you might suggest for future exploration?
- How would you assess the communication skills employed by the worker?
- In what ways was the worker's attention to diversity evident?
- What are the strengths and weaknesses of the process recording in the following areas: adequacy of assessment; demonstration of empathy; development of interventions; use of self awareness; development of questions; application of metaphor; appropriate confrontation; and establishment of helping relationships.
- Add suggestions, reactions, reflections, and comments from your own reading and experience.
- Discuss and delineate your reactions to the questions posed in the Interview Analysis.

Enactments

After Interview Critiques have been submitted, consultation groups should meet, briefly review each case, and provide feedback. At the conclusion of this discussion, the group should select one case to present to the entire class. You can reenact a portion of the interview in a role-play, provide a case presentation, or use some other format to creatively depict the session with the purpose of seeking broader input on effective social work techniques that might be employed with the client(s). You will have 15 minutes to present the case, briefly summarize your team's comments, and list issues you want the class to discuss. The class will spend 10-15 minutes responding. I can assist you as needed in preparing the presentation.

Assignment 2: Interview Critiques

Grading Standards

Unique Student Identifier: _____

Each element is worth 5 points, for a total of 50 points per Critique. The total for the two Critiques is 100 points.

Evaluation Elements:	Score
The Critique provides specific, detailed, substantiated feedback that can help the worker ¹ improve his or her practice skills.
To help the worker further understand the client’s situation, this paper provides new, substantiated, information pertaining to the client’s problem.
The Critique fully addresses areas of the Intervention Analysis that need further understanding, information, or clarity.
It accurately incorporates at least five pertinent concepts from class discussions and readings.
The Critique reflects an understanding of various dimensions of diversity as they may apply to the assessment.
The Critique identifies and acknowledges key social work values and ethical principles as they relate to this case.
The critique thoughtfully considers the diagnostic summary, providing confirmation only if warranted. It offers additional insight and suggestions for improvement.
It fully addresses the questions posed in the Interview Analysis.
Overall, the document is well-written, uses nonjudgmental language and demonstrates basic mastery of sentence structure, with no errors in spelling, punctuation, grammar, or typing.
The references adhere to APA guidelines.

Assignment 3
Biopsychosociospiritual Assessment

For this assignment, you will review a video depicting an interview with a client. This will be the basis for a biopsychosocial assessment, including preliminary treatment goals, evaluation methods, and an intervention plan. You must also include a brief summation of at least two references from the professional literature that are relevant to and supportive of the conclusions you put forth in your assessment. A concluding analysis section should indicate areas where further information is needed, areas of difference that may come into play in the case, or other issues you would want to remain aware of if you were responsible for this case.

The intent of this assignment is to mirror as closely as possible what might be expected of you in writing an assessment following a session with a client. You may take hand-written notes during the video; however, you may not record the video in any way, and you may not use your computer during the viewing. You may not consult with fellow students in the preparation of this assignment. You will be graded on the accuracy and clarity of your assessment, but you have a good deal of latitude in crafting goals as long as they are consistent with the assessment findings and are supported by material from the course and the practice literature.

Your paper should be approximately ten pages in length, exclusive of cover page and bibliography. Use 1" margins and 12-point Times New Roman type. Since these papers will be graded anonymously, put your name, signed honor code, and unique identifier (number, name, or letters) on the cover page. Submit this separately from the body of the paper. Only your unique identifier should appear on the body of the paper.

Course readings and handouts provide guidance for preparing a biopsychosocial assessment, but your assessment should be organized under the following headings:

1. Demographic information, presenting problem, and mental status
2. Current and previous agency contacts
3. Medical, psychiatric, and substance abuse history and data
4. Brief history of the client, including salient relationships with significant others
5. Summary of the current situation, including mitigating interpersonal, and environmental factors and client strengths
6. Diagnostic summary/ Analysis of the problem-for-work and relevant factors
7. Preliminary treatment plan: goals, objectives, and interventions
8. Case reflections
