

Trauma and Recovery for Adults

Program Description

About 7.7 million American adults experience PTSD in any given year's time. This does not adequately capture the number of individuals who have experienced at least one trauma during their lifetime, may not meet the full criteria for PTSD yet are nonetheless impacted. When left untreated, the symptoms of PTSD and effects of trauma are unlikely to dissipate on their own and may increase the risk of developing chronic pain, depression, drug and alcohol abuse and sleep problems that interfere with one's ability to work and have meaningful relationships.

This workshop will explore the biopsychosocial effects of trauma and PTSD, components in the treatment of trauma that are vital to promote resiliency and recovery, as well as identify the importance of self-care as a helping professional working with trauma survivors. This workshop will discuss trauma in adult clients only.

Program Objectives

Upon completion of this workshop, participants should be able to:

- Review DSM-V diagnostic criteria for Post Traumatic Stress Disorder as well as identify co-occurring disorders
- Describe the biopsychosocial effects of trauma
- Discuss the concept of risk and resiliency factors in the recovery process
- Identify crucial components in the treatment of trauma
- Recognize signs of vicarious traumatization as well as the necessary steps towards self-care as a trauma professional.

Target Audience

This workshop will be highly beneficial to all mental health practitioners who work with adult clients who have experienced some sort of trauma. This includes social workers, psychologists, counselors, substance abuse professionals, nurses, case managers, adult clinicians, and therapists.
