A preference is granted for exceptional non-traditional, Carolina Covenant, student parent, and transfer students as well as requests accompanied with a grant application from a nonprofit organization.

CFK James and Florence Peacock Fellowship: The Carolina for Kibera Fellowship offers graduate and undergraduate students at UNC-CH the opportunity to apply their skills and talents while engaging in grassroots participatory development in the Kibera slum of Nairobi, Kenya. This year-long fellowship begins in the spring, where students will work with CFK staff in the U.S. and Kenya to formulate projects and to prepare for traveling to Kibera, one of the largest slums in Africa. In the summer, students will spend eight to ten weeks in Kibera to implement their project. Upon their return to the U.S., fellows will become involved on campus at UNC, teaching students about Kibera during the fall semester.

Community Engagement Fellowship: The Community Engagement Fellowship program awards a maximum of seven fellowships of up to $2,000 each year to develop and implement engagement or engaged scholarship projects that (1) employ innovative, sustainable approaches to complex social needs and (2) have an academic connection. Returning, full-time graduate students (individuals or teams) at UNC-Chapel Hill are eligible to apply with preference given to interdisciplinary teams of students. The fellowships run from March-November with project implementation occurring during the summer.

C.V. Starr Scholarship: These awards are intended to support UNC students who have no or limited prior global travel and demonstrate financial need to undertake an independent internationally-oriented experience. The C.V. Starr International Scholarships were established at UNC in 2004 with an endowed gift from The Starr Foundation.
