

Navigating Diversity in the Supervisory Relationship

MSW students increasingly represent a diverse and intersecting range of identities and will work with individuals with multiple intersecting identities as part of their practicum experiences and throughout their careers. Field instructors serve as a powerful influence for social work learning, ethics and values identification, and skills development during the MSW process. This training is designed to increase field instructor skill and capacity to navigate challenges and opportunities related to diversity and difference which may arise as part of the field experience.

The SSW Field Education Program is offering a new 90-minute free training module for field instructors with 1.5 CE hours.

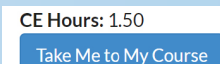

This on-line, asynchronous training includes a narrated PowerPoint, video and reflection activities. Once participants finish viewing the narrated PowerPoint, they will complete a learning assessment and training evaluation. Completion of the assessment and evaluation will provide participants with access to a certificate documenting continuing education hours.

To log in to the training site, please follow the directions that best fit your account status with the School of Social Work events website.

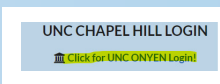

If you are new to the SSW events site, please create an account by clicking on this page. Then click on to this site to enroll in the training. Please click on “Take me to my course”. It will open another page where you can enroll in the course and will look like this:

If you created an account in the past on the SSW events site, just log on using that account on this page. Do not create a second account. Then click on to this site to enroll in the training. Please click on “Take me to my course”. It will open another page where you can enroll in the course and will look like this:

UNC folks will login using their ONYEN, on this page. Be sure to click on the button for UNC ONYEN Login:

After you log in with your ONYEN, click on to this site to enroll in the training. Please click on “Take me to my course”. It will open another page where you can enroll in the course and will look like this:

If you experience any difficulties in the enrollment process or need help accessing the training, please contact Carol Ann Hincy at chincy@email.unc.edu